

Reconciliation

What is Reconciliation, what does this word mean? there are many ways of knowing what it is:

1. The restoration of friendly relations.
2. The action of making one view or belief compatible with another.
3. Processes of dealing with the past.
4. Restoring mutual respect between individuals from different cultural backgrounds.
5. The act of causing two people or groups to become friendly again after an argument or disagreement
6. The process of finding a way to make two different ideas, facts, etc., exist or be true at the same time

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission believes the Education system is the key. To educate children, ourselves and about Aboriginal, Inuit and Metis people. history and reconciling it to move forward. Also to use appropriate text books and support Aboriginal people within the system to speak about relevant information so that we can learn from our past, heal and move towards a brighter future for the many generations to come. The truth lies in our future, which is influenced by our past and we must ask what can we do today to make that happen successfully.

For more information go to the website: <http://www.trc.ca>

Watch the video: <https://vimeo.com/25389165>

It is up to all of us to reconcile...all of us have to own this process and we must work together to make it happen.

Reconciliation Canada catalyzes meaningful relationships through values-based dialogue, leadership and action. Their dialogue, speaker series, national, regional and local initiatives all work towards engaging all Canadians in the action of Reconciliation.

They work with the Jewish, Japanese and other communities to share their stories of impact stories of Reconciliation and the successes driven from this. Excellent resources, stories and much more at: <http://reconciliationcanada.ca/>

“If we can weave the resiliences of all communities, imagine what kind of Canada we can build for our children”
@KarenJosephRCI @Rec_Can